Edith-

Here is a link to a website that I thought might be helpful in regards to the work we are doing on grazing public lands:

<http://www.calands.org/map?x=-122.2970218&y=37.7649761&z=10>

It looks like it shows all public land ownership throughout the state. You can click on any property and get the name, ownership info, and website. Does this seem like what people at the workshop were looking for when they talked about making a public lands map? Can we look at this on the computer at the next meeting, or email it out to the group? I guess it depends on how we decide to move forward on the whole public grazing thing, but this seemed like it might be a helpful tool.
